

Rev. Bingham Preaches To The Graduates

Class of 1921 Attend Evening Service in Methodist Church

NOW TO ENTER WORLD

Must Take Their Places in the Community And Help to Develop It

Matt. 25:29—"For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath!"

This was the text from which the Rev. J. J. Bingham, pastor of Methodist Church, last night preached to the graduating class of the Bristol high school.

The class accompanied by the superintendent and teachers attended the service and occupied seats together.

In his sermon to the graduates Mr. Bingham said that now that they had come to the all important time in their careers, that they were like a traveler. They could look back over that through which they had passed with satisfaction and that they could look forward with expectations for the future.

He spoke of how when a child entered school for the first and attempted to imagine the higher classes above. "They looked very difficult and as you gazed through the various books you wondered how one could learn that which they contained."

Then he told the graduates that while they may never use the various subjects, which they had studied that it all had tended to develop their mind and brain and thus enabled them to grasp the other things in life. "Now you have come to a greater knowledge in life and consequently have greater responsibilities, and with this greater knowledge you will have greater opportunities."

He urged the students to give themselves to service. "Even if this service be without recompense," he cautioned them that the field of service was not an idle one.

"Your schooling is not finished nor your tasks ended," he said.

Continuing he showed them how this greater knowledge would better enable them to take their place in the home and now that women have the ballot how it would better fit them to exercise that franchise. "Every woman should vote, because the constitution now gives her that privilege," he declared.

He told of how they had discussed the men of affairs in the community and "now you are to take your place with them in the community," he concluded.

In his sermon Mr. Bingham urged all to work for the upbuilding and uplift of the community and for them to try and be of service to the community and to help others.

Want Auto Traffic Diverted Off Mill St.

Business Men to Petition Borough Council to Take Some Action

MANY SIGN REQUEST

A petition is being circulated among the business men and residents of Mill and Radcliffe street requesting borough council to divert the heavy truck off of those two streets.

The petition has been signed by most of the property owners and residents of Mill street and is now in the hands of a committee, which is soliciting signers along Radcliffe street.

It is argued by those who are in sympathy with the movement that traffic along Mill and Radcliffe streets is too heavy to permit the heavy truck traffic to traverse these streets.

"There is likely to be serious accidents with the traffic of these streets and the trolley cars and then this heavy truck traffic," said one who is interested in the movement today. "We are going to present the petition to the chairman of the street committee and request him to divert this traffic over some other thoroughfares," he said.

Since the closing of the Lincoln highway traffic along Otter, Bath, Buckley, Beaver, Mill and Radcliffe streets has more than doubled. Great heavy trucks, like freight cars, rumble through and it is these that the petitioners object to mainly.

It is also said that people patronizing the Mill street stores and coming to town in automobiles are afraid to park their cars along that street.

Concentrating Russians In The Caucasus

Strong Forces Being Assembled With Artillery and Armored Cars

TURKS LEAVE KARS

Transport Large Amount of War Materials to Anatolian Coast

By International News Service. CONSTANTINOPLE, June 20—The concentration of strong forces of Russian troops in the Caucasus, supported with artillery and armored cars, has enabled the Turkish Nationalists to withdraw troops from that district and the Kemal army in Anatolia is continually being reinforced, according to information received here today.

Following the occupation of Kars by part of the Eleventh army corps of the Russian army, the Turks withdrew and large amounts of Russian war materials were transported to the Anatolian coast.

There are indications that the presence of King Constantine has not checked the demoralization which began to permeate the Greek army. The Greek King was reported to have been seized with an indisposition at Smyrna, but Constantine illness is attributed in some quarters to unfavorable reception he received from Cretan soldiers who hissed him. The Cretans are loyal to former Premier Venizelos of Greece, himself a Cretan, who was forced to flee from Greece when Constantine returned from exile.

Cretan soldiers mutinied while embarking from Rodosto for Anatolia and attacked their officers. The official account of the incident was that it was a drunken brawl, but another version is the Cretans refused to fight for Constantine, Greek royalist troops suppressed the mutiny and four of the ringleaders were shot.

Military experts here believe that the position of the Turks is superior to that of the Greeks. Evacuation of Zonguldak has been commenced by the French. The Italians are sending a force into the Meander valley from Adalia to prevent the Greeks from entering to out-flank the Turks. Italian warships have arrived at Adalia and are disembarking marines.

The activities of the French and Italians are explained by the fact that both countries have entered into armistice with the Turks.

"Bud" Stillman is Now in Spotlight

By International News Service. NEW YORK, June 20—James Stillman Jr., or "Bud" as he is known to his school mates, took the leading publicity role in the sensational divorce case of former banker James A. Stillman today, following his interview in which he denounced his father and revealed that a split has occurred among the children with his sister Anne supporting her father.

Young Stillman—he is only 17—is a student at Milton Academy. He has been "cranking" for examination which began today. His interview in support of his mother was the most striking human interest utterance that has come out of the whole sensational case.

It was learned from an authoritative source today that Mrs. Stillman will demand that the charge of illegitimacy, brought by her husband against her young son Guy, be dismissed when the divorce hearings are resumed before Referee Daniel J. Gleason on June 28. For the time being Mrs. Stillman has centered her fight in behalf of her little son.

According to present plans of Stillman's counsel the plaintiffs evidence in support of his illegitimacy charge will be completed when the hearings are resumed and then Mrs. Stillman can begin her counter move. The demand for the dismissal of the charge against Guy must be made by attorney John E. Mack, guardian at law for Guy. It is reported that Stillman is preparing a new offer for a settlement but so far as known no definite developments have taken place in this connection.

Mrs. Florence Leeds, the correspondent in Mrs. Stillman's counter action for divorce has dropped from sight. Her friends said they could not confirm the report that Stillman had broken with her and had given her $500,000 as well as offering to support and educate little Jay Leeds. Mrs. Stillman alleges that her husband is really the father of Jay.

As a means of paying for the work the borough will issue $4,000 worth of bonds, which will be offered to the public.

Senate Considers Coal Situation

Bitter Battle Starts Between Advocates of Gov't Regulation of Business

FIGHT OPENS TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 20—The Senate plunged today into what threatens to be a long, bitterly fought battle between the advocates of government regulations of "Big Business" and the proponents of "less government in business."

The immediate issue was the Frelinghuysen seasonal coal rate bill. But behind the opposition and support centered upon it was the renewed warfare between the forces seeking to have the government direct the production, transportation and marketing of food, clothes, and fuel, and those who contend that they should be left to the law of supply and demand, and of private business.

The Frelinghuysen bill, given the right of way as the "unfinished business" of the Senate was the vehicle for fresh onslaughts upon the Esch-Cummings transportation act by Senator La Follette, Republican of Wisconsin, chairman of the Transportation sub-committee of the senatorial "agricultural bloc," and other senators bent upon dragging the whole railroad problem before the Senate again.

Senators identified with the "agricultural bloc" defended Secretary of Commerce Hoover from attacks directed by interests opposed to the Frelinghuysen bill. Hoover conferred recently with the "agricultural bloc."

Why should readjustment of the coal situation, by initiating lower freight rates during the spring and summer months and higher rates during the fall and winter months, as proposed by the Frelinghuysen bill, be confined to coal, senators inquired; if seasonal coal rates are to be provided, why not open up the entire freight rate question, and demand a complete readjustment of all freight rates and railroad conditions?

"The bill incorporates suggestions by Chairman Clark, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and it has the unqualified and unanimous approval of the members of the commission," said Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, of New Jersey, one of the authors of the bill bearing his name.

"An unlawful and inquisitorial interference with the right of industry and business—paternalistic, discriminatory and unconstitutional"—contended the National Coal Association composed of bituminous coal operators, of the other Frelinghuysen bill intended to turn the light of "pitiless publicity" upon the coal industry.

A motion to send both Frelinghuysen coal bills back to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee by which they were favorably reported, was also under way. The motion was to be based upon the ground that those opposed to them had insufficient opportunity to air their views as to why the government should let the coal industry severely alone.

Defeat of Volstead Bill Is Predicted By Opposition

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 20—Defeat for the Volstead bill to outlaw beer was predicted today, as the row between the dyes began to take on more fire. The prohibitionists were at loggerheads when "Andy" Volstead, author of the new bill to make medicinal beer drinking a crime, went before the House Rules Committee for a grilling. Their camp was split wide open today by the charges and counter-charges of bad faith passed between Wayne Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-saloon League, and Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, leader of several national temperance bodies.

The "wets" wept no bitter tears today as Dinwiddie turned loose a verbal torrent of criticism against Wheel-

Conference To Determine On New Alliance

Imperial Meeting Opens Today to Consider Anglo-Japanese Treaty

MANY QUESTIONS UP

Initial Session Was Brief and Statement is to Be Issued

By International News Service. LONDON, June 20—The form in which the anglo-japanese treaty of alliance is renewed—if it is renewed at all—will be determined in the imperial conference which opened here today. For a month the premiers of England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa will discuss questions of policy affecting the British empire. India will have representation in the sessions.

The initial session of Premier Lloyd George and the delegates from the British overseas dominions was held at Downing street, but it is understood later the conference will be shifted to St. James Palace.

The chief questions which will come before the conference are:

1. The anglo-japanese treaty of alliance;
  2. Disarmament and the part overseas dominions shall play in "naval police duty";
  3. New air routes to link the component parts of the British empire and bring them closer together by means of aerial navigation;
  4. Trade relations between the dominions and the mother countries;
  5. Means of strengthening the ties between the homeland and the dominions;
  6. Imperial postage rates.
- Among the English Cabinet ministers present in addition to Premier Lloyd George were Austen Chamberlain, who succeeded A. Bonar Law as government leader in Commons; Colonial Minister Winston Churchill; A. J. Balfour, Lord President of the council, and E. S. Montagu, secretary for India.

The session was secret, but it is stated that a communique would be issued at four o'clock containing the high lights of Premier Lloyd George's opening speech on British policy.

The initial session was brief and it was announced that no afternoon meeting would be held. The agenda for the conference will not be arranged until later.

Greek Warships Sink Turkish Small Craft

By International News Service. ATHENS, 20 June 20—Many small crafts which were discharging arms for the Turkish Nationalists were sunk by Greek warships at Inedoli (Treboli) on the Black Sea coast near Trebizond according to the following communique issued here today:

"A Greek squadron demanded the delivery of forty launches that were discharging war materials at Inedoli. Surrender was refused by the Turks. Following the evacuation of that town by the civilian population the Greek squadron began a bombardment. Many launches and two coastwise ships were sunk. Warehouses containing war supplies were destroyed. The Turkish battery defending the town was silenced."

Official circles are opposed to the suggestion of the allies that the Greek halt their offensive until the allies can mediate in an effort to arrange peace between Greece and Turkey.

Defeat of Volstead Bill Is Predicted By Opposition

er and accused him of prime responsibility for an imminent flood of beer and liquor such as the country has not known for 20 months since the "dry" era began. Dinwiddie was vehement over Wheeler's accusation that he was "aiding and abetting the wets." Dinwiddie came back with a "punch" and said of all persons in the land Wheeler is to be chiefly blamed for the refusal of Congress to make the beer bill a means of paralyzing legitimate industrial users of alcohol.

"There will be a deluge of beer and other liquors, and Wheeler is to be blamed for his obstinate attitude," said Dinwiddie. "He alone is responsible, if delay results from his notion that anti-beer legislation must be hooked (Continued on Page 4, Col. 5.)

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATIONS

Back in 1909 there were 215 people killed in July Fourth accidents, with 5307 injured. The casualties incurred in celebrating the War for Independence have been far more numerous than those caused by fighting that war. Also hundreds of millions worth of property have been burned up in July Fourth fires. It was about as if a young man; desiring to observe his 21st birthday, should proceed to put out an eye or cut off a few fingers to show how happy he was over his coming of age.

During recent years the sale of dangerous explosives has been much reduced, and police forces are more disposed to keep disturbers within bounds of decency. It used to be noticeable in many places that the chief July Fourth disturbers were young men of alien descent who had no true American spirit. They welcomed the traditional outbreaks as a time for general hoodlumism. But there are plenty of hooligans of American birth who would still be glad to join in whatever mischief may be going.

Such disturbances occur frequently when no good programs of sports are offered to arouse legitimate interest in the day. Fourth of July celebrates the determination of the American people to manifest their own initiative and power, so it is a day peculiarly appropriate to manly sports and displays of strength and agility. If the young men of a town are asked to co-operate in getting up pastimes and trials of skill and endurance, a lot of active fellows who want an outlet for their energy will forget about mischief and conserve their forces for the races and games.

The people of Bristol should do their best each year to see that July Fourth is made a day appealing to the active young crowd. The police should realize that the public is tired of destructive mischief, and that sale of dangerous explosives and the starting of bonfires that constitute any peril to property should be severely repressed and punished.

OUTDOOR PASTIME

Baseball bids fair to be indefinitely the favorite outdoor sport of America. Lawn tennis probably comes second, but closely rivalling it is the ancient game of golf, which is making tremendous progress in popularity.

The impression prevails that golf is a rich man's game. It is operated on that basis in many places. The links frequently cover a hundred or two acres in some suburb where land is expensive, elaborate club houses with costly service and restaurants are maintained. People who must have expensive social life might care little for the game if all these accessories were not included.

But golf can be thoroughly enjoyed, even if the games are not rolled and trimmed to almost billiard table smoothness. The people who love the game for itself need no costly club house. With locker rooms for storing their playing outfits, and shower baths to clean up in after their active exercise, they are perfectly content. Many clubs have been successfully run on that basis for dues of $10 to $25 a year, with expenses totalling about equal amount for clubs and balls. Many hard working people spend more than that for less beneficial pleasure.

It is a wonderful game that clears away the fogs from everyone's mind. The best of it is that you can keep playing it after you are too creaky in the joints to go in for baseball and tennis. The time will come when every sizable town and village will have its golf links.

Many other games might be mentioned that add to the attractiveness of a community. Simple old fashioned croquet, with the developed form of it called roque, has given pleasant diversion to millions of people. Every playground and neighborhood should give facilities for playing it. All such games prevent people from getting restless and discontented. Whatever can be done in Bristol to improve the facilities for such sports, builds up the town just as much as getting in new factories.

IN THE WAKE OF FLOOD

When thousands of people at Pueblo, Colo., were made homeless by a terrific sweep of flood waters, a great deal of personal suffering was created. Many people have been made homeless, and they lack clothing and food. Many of them have lost all their personal belongings and money, and they can't earn anything more until the factories and stores and shops can be restored. The total loss is around $20,000,000. The Colorado people have been sending out urgent appeals for aid, but the contributions have been regrettably small.

People who live in comfortable homes far from any such scene of desolation, can form no conception of what it must be to fall victim of such a calamity. Those who have lost their little all in such a catastrophe, and are dependent upon the uncertain help of charity, must feel as if life were scarcely worth living. Some of them perhaps wish they had been swept away in the boiling flood that may have carried away some of those nearest to them.

Everyone would say this was the kind of cause that would appeal to all kinds of people, and that a perfect outpouring of money should be coming in. Yet for all that, recent reports have had it that funds were coming in very slowly, and there must be a lot of unrelieved suffering on those bleak plains.

There is a great deal of kindly sentiment in the world that amounts to nothing because it does not get to the point of doing anything for cases of distress. Some people always offer the excuse for not giving to such a cause, that they do not know where to send the money. The Courier will gladly assist by assuming responsibility for forwarding any such contributions. Send your money or check to this office, and the same will be acknowledged and forwarded to the American Red Cross, or whatever agency may be designated to receive the same.

COMMENCEMENT ESSAYS

It is customary for cynical people to poke fun at the many suggestions for public improvement and reform made in the commencement essays of school and college graduates. These views are commonly looked at as idealistic and chimerical.

Young folks who have had a good course of study see many wrong conditions in the world. Assuming that everyone would wish to act in a fair and sensible manner, it is natural for them to think that the people generally would co-operate for the same.

But when these young folks get out into life, they often find that these hopes can not be realized. The trouble may not be with the ideals. Much more likely it is because the average run of people are selfish and petty, disposed to consider their own personal interest and to take a very short sighted view of that. So the trouble is not with the point of view of the young people, so much as with the tough and hardened old world that refuses to see the light and act on it.

Recent reports state that Andrew Carnegie established 2,811 libraries.

LENINE AND TROTSKY: "Hey! Throw Out the Lifeline!"

By MORRIS

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, in appearing before the House Rules Committee, charged that a "hooligan's trust" exists in the United States. He declined, however, to make his accusation specific or to say who was in the trust, because, as he expressed it, he is not yet ready to haul them into "dry dock."

store watching the clock, which is still operated on Standard Time. When the hands stood at 12 o'clock noon he started home for his dinner and upon arrival found everything cleared away and nothing left to eat.

Indignantly he hunted his mother and asked for an explanation only to be told that the household was now operating on Daylight Time and if he wanted to keep up with the progress of events he must work accordingly.

He was enroute to Doylestown one day recently and upon his arrival at the county seat, he reported that while traveling along the road in the automobile that he had seen a deer in a field. He gave the exact spot and the identical location and told at length how the graceful animal held his head up and sniffed the air as the machine rolled by.

Another Bristol man, shortly after hearing the story, left the county seat for Bristol and came back to town over the same route. He watched for that deer and when he reached the spot designated by the one who claimed to have seen the deer, there stood a goat nibbling at the grass.

Now someone either purposely replaced that deer with a goat or else the first man herein mentioned doesn't know the difference between a goat and a deer.

When polishing furniture always wash it over beforehand with a weak solution of ammonia and warm water. This will remove all grease and finger marks.

A Man for the Ages

A Story of the Builders of Democracy

By Irving Bacheller

Doctor Allen demurred as follows: "The other night you happened to remember that you had overcharged Mrs. Peters for a jug of molasses and after you had closed the store you walked three miles to return the money which belonged to her. Why did you do it?"

"For a selfish motive," said Abe. "I believe honesty is the best policy."

"Then you took that long walk just to advertise your honesty—to induce people to call you 'Honest Abe' as they have begun to do?"

"I wouldn't want to put it that way," said Abe.

"But that's the only way out," the Doctor insisted, "and we know ones would have to call you 'Sordid Abe.'"

"There's a hidden Abe and you haven't got acquainted with him yet," Kelso interposed. "We have all caught a glimpse of him tonight. He's the Abe that loves honor and justice and humanity and their great temple of freedom that is growing up here in the new world. He loves them better than fame or fortune or life itself. I think it must have been that Abe whose voice sounded like a trumpet just now and who sent you off to Mrs. Peters with the money. You haven't the chance to know him that we have. Some day you two will get acquainted."

At this moment there was a loud rap on the door. Mr. Kelso opened it and said: "Hello, Eli! Come in."

A hairy-faced, bow-legged man, bent under a great pack, partly covered with bed ticking, stood in the doorway.

"Hello, Mr. Kelso," the bearded man answered. "The poor vandering Jew has come back ag'in—hey? I tink I haf to take de hump off my back before I gits in."

Staggering beneath his load he let it down to the ground.

"Bring in your Trojan horse and mind you do not let out its four and twenty warriors until morning. I'll have some bread and milk for you in a minute. Gentlemen, this is my friend Eli—a vandering pioneer of trade."

"I haf a wonderful line o' goods—vonderful! vonderful!" said Eli, gesturing with both hands.

"First supper—then open your Trojan horse," said Kelso.

"First I must show my goods," Eli insisted. "an' I'll bet you take dem all—everything vat I have in dot pack an' you pay my price an' you tauk me an' say 'Eli, vat you have to drink?'"

"I'll bet you four bits I don't," said Kelso.

"You are my frient; I would not take your money like dot so easy. No! It would not be right. These are Scotch goods, gentlemen—so rare an' beautiful—noting like dem in de world."

He began to undo his pack while the little company stood around him.

"Gentlemen, you can see but you cannot buy. Only my frient can have dem goods," he went on glibly as he removed the cover of the pack.

Suddenly there was a lively stir in it. To the amazement of all a beautiful girl threw aside the ticking and leaped out of the large wicker basket it had covered. With a merry laugh she threw her arms around Jack Kelso's neck and kissed him.

The men clapped their hands in noisy merriment.

"That's like him, isn't it?" said the Doctor.

"Exactly!" Abe exclaimed.

"I stop at David Barney's an' dere she took de goods out o' my pack an' fix up dis job lot fer you," said Eli with a laugh.

"A real surprise party!" the girl exclaimed.

She was a small-sized girl, nearing sixteen, with red cheeks and hazel eyes and blonde hair that fell in curls upon her shoulders.

"Mr. Traylor, this is my daughter Bina," said Kelso. "She is skilled in the art of producing astonishment."

"She must have heard of that handsome boy at the tavern and got in a hurry to come home," said the Doctor.

"Ann Rutledge says that he is a right party boy," the girl laughed as she brushed her curls aside.

CHAPTER IV.

Which Presents Other Log-Cabin Folk and the First Steps in the Making of a New Home and Certain Capacities and Incapacities of Abe.

Next morning at daylight two parties went out in the woods to cut timber for the home of the newcomers. In one party were Harry Needles carrying two axes and a well-filled lunch-eon pail; Samson with a saw in his hand and the boy Joe on his back; Abe with a saw and ax and a small jug of root beer and a book tied in a big red handkerchief and slung around his neck. When they reached the woods Abe cut a pole for the small boy and carried him on his shoulder to the creek and said:

"Now you sit down here and keep order in this little frog city. If you hear a frog say anything improper you fetch him a whack. Don't allow any nonsense. We'll make you mayor of Frog City."

HUMAN INTEREST ITEMS GATHERED ABOUT TOWN AND ITS PEOPLE

It is the habit of a certain uptown man to have his son polish his shoes for him on Sunday mornings. The boy does the job willingly and thoroughly and yesterday I happened to be a witness to the incident.

The father was comfortably seated on a chair in the back yard. His feet rested on the rear step and the son polished away. The man of the house sat tilted back on a chair, puffing at a cigar and reading. He was the acme of comfort.

The boy went about his work unconscious of the amusing spectacle the pair presented and the father continued his reading unaware of any one

Masons To Quit Eastern Star

Twenty Thousand Members To Sever Relations or Quit Masons

ORDER MAILED TO ALL

Upward of 20,000 Masons in this State, who also are members of the order of the Eastern Star, are ordered either to drop their affiliation with the latter or resign their Masonic membership.

Dual membership by men is taboo under an edict of John S. Sells, of Greensburg, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania.

His order has been mailed to the 150,000 members of the Masonic Fraternity in Pennsylvania.

Under the Grand Master's ultimatum, the men have six months, beginning June 1, to indicate their preference.

The Grand Master's order, promulgated June 1, though it has been under discussion by high lodge officials since March, has resulted in much agitation among the affected members.

A group of Masons it is reported, is talking of applying to the courts for an injunction to prevent the Grand Lodge from executing the order.

"Too much petticoat government," is ascribed by opponents of the Grand Master's ultimatum as the reason for the move aimed at dual membership in the Order of the Eastern Star.

The latter organization, which has a membership of approximately 66,000 in this state, is holding its annual meeting in Wilkes-Barre.

The Order of the Eastern Star, it was explained today, never has been officially recognized by the Masonic Grand Lodge, of Pennsylvania, although the order is recognized by State lodges in the West and uses Masonic hall there for meetings.

The Order of the Eastern Star is composed of members of Free-masonry and their wives, sisters, daughters, mothers and widows. Its membership is composed principally of women, and in the country numbers about 1,500,000.

Antagonism against the Order of the Eastern Star arose chiefly in Western Pennsylvania. Complaints reached officers of the Grand Lodge that women were influencing their husbands or men relatives in election of officers of Masonic lodges.

Masonic histories relate that the Order of the Eastern Star as introduced in New York City in 1778, supposedly by French officers.

In several States the grand chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star are interested with Masonic bodies in the maintenance of homes and in special lines of charity. It is patterned along the lines of Freemasonry, and imparts degrees.

The supreme test of true love is the subject of Clara Kimball Young's latest photoplay to be shown at the Forrest Theatre tonight "Straight From Paris," whose author is Sada Cowan, a gifted writer rapidly coming to the forefront and responsible for Miss Young's former production "Hush."

In her unadorned beauty, Lucette cannot help attracting the attentions of aristocratic members of society. In the web of a romance which she cannot control, the shop-girl hides her identity for fear of the scorn that her wealthy admirers would shower upon her once they learned that Lucette was not of their own set, but an ordinary working-girl. discovery is made, and here "Straight From Paris" reaches its climax. Shall wealth and social standing be the criterion of marriage? Is it what the girl has, or what the girl is that decides? ## New Colonial Theatre

A picture that will excite more than passing comment will be shown at New Colonial theatre tonight. It is a visualization of Anna Sewell's famous novel "Black Beauty." The film is one of the most unique to be flashed upon the screen. It marks a new era of story telling, that of blending two narratives into one and at the same time keeping each story separate from the other. This feat, which several have attempted and failed has been achieved by Lillian and George Randolph Chester authors of international repute.

Anna Sewell's story was that seen by his horse. It hinted at things that were going on in the big house, but which Black Beauty could not know. Mr. and Mrs. Chester have supplied the inside story after carefully analyzing Anna Sewell's narrative. They made this coincide with the original tale in every instance so that the two blended into one and the reason for the Squire going to town on the rainy day in which the bridge was swept away is made clear. It also shows why the family went to the hotel the night the stables took fire and Black Beauty had a thrilling escape. Every incident in Anna Sewell's story is illustrated

In the picture and is in no way subordinated to the new narrative.

A large and expensive cast was engaged for the production and headed by Jean Paige.

There is on record a case where a pardon actually worked to keep in prison a man who would otherwise have been free and this strange situation is used with dramatic effect in the ninth episode of "Fighting Fate," the latest Vitaphone chapter, which may be seen at the New Colonial theatre tonight.

William Duncan, as the man imprisoned, is about to make good his escape from the Mexican jail where bandits have thrown him, when the American consul arrives to get him his liberty. His attempt at jail breaking is disclosed he is caught in the act and a series of thrilling complications ensue.

Moffo and Reno Ready For Battle

Bristol Boy In Great Shape
For Battle at Trenton
Arena Tonight

MANY FANS TO GO

Everything is all set for the big battle tonight at the Trenton Arena when Young Moffo, of Bristol meets Young Reno, of Trenton, in a 12 round fight.

There is a big crowd of Bristol fight fans going to journey to the New Jersey City tonight to see the Bristol boy put up one of the stiffest fights of his ring career.

Moffo is no tame boxer and when he steps into the ring tonight, he will be in the pink of condition and almost 100 per cent perfect. He has been working hard this week and Saturday when he ceased training he was O. K.

Saturday he was put through every stunt imaginable to the modern boxer and worked right up to the limit. When he quit he was as calm and as cool as if he had just stepped out of bed.

Neither Moffo or Reno moved the beam after they finished working at the stipulated weight, 142 pounds. Consequently they should both be well under the weight at the time set forth in the articles for them to make weight.

Moffo had a hard workout Saturday. He went through his paces in the gymnasium and then boxed six rounds that had all the ear marks of being a real fight. Young Ketchell of Bristol went the last three rounds with Moffo and carried him along at a furious pace. Moffo finished without taking a long breath.

Reno worked at the Lenoxville Club gym as usual. He boxed with Kid Emmmons, who is to meet Monte Barker in a special eight round match. Emmmons has trained Reno for the Moffo bout and has incidentally gotten himself in fine shape.

TAD'S TID-BITS

THOSE WERE THE HAPPY DAYS

Remember Frank P. Slavin, the Australian? He was better known as Paddy and was tougher than whale-bone. Slavin was one of the toughest men that ever left Australia. He fought with bare knuckles and with gloves. He also fought in barrooms. Once he ran second to Peter Jackson in a merry mullage parlor in Sydney and later beat Charlie Mitchell in a London "pub".

Anyway, Paddy has written a letter for a British Columbia paper. It is quite interesting. Here goes:

"To Sporting Editor:

"Dear Sir—In your issue of the 25th inst. I noticed a special paragraph in your sporting column re the last London Prize Ring contest fought for the championship honors.

"No sir, to be correct and give accurate data, that fight was fought 31 years ago on the 23d day of December 1889, between Jim Smith, champion of England, and myself, champion of Australia and contender for the world championship honors. Well I had the money and the grit to stake on my ability to beat any man alive in those good old days when such things as purses were not known; the days when honors counted and were thought more of than half million dollar purses.

This fight took place in Bruges, Belgium, at Squire Crimshaw's mansion, on the lawn tennis court at 7 a. m. Sunday morning, December 23, 1889, and lasted fourteen rounds, occupying 23 minutes of the most one-sided kind of contest.

"I had to fight as well as Smith, some forty or fifty Birmingham roughs imported by Smith's backers to see that Smith did not lose their money ($2,500) on the championship.

"Those roughs used knuckle-dusters and walking sticks on my head and Smith wore fighting shoes with spikes one inch long; the regulation spike was one third of an inch in those days and if I had not been put wise by the man who made our boots I would have had to file off those spikes; but I had my boots armored with a double sole leather shaped over the uppers of my shoes, and I never got a scratch. Although the outer covering of my boots was cut to smithereens, my feet were not scratched.

"At the end of fourteen rounds the referee declared the fight a draw. He said he would not stay and see Slavin killed by the rough gang at the ring side. The referee's name was Mr. Jim Bettie, an old retired prize ring champion of a class in those days. If I could have got my guns—I had two in my overcoat pockets hanging on a cherry tree outside the ring—I would have given Bettie what was coming to him, as he allowed the worst kind of treatment to be dealt out to me. If I was a ferocious wild animal it could not have been worse. He allowed Smith's seconds (five in all) to stay in the ring and assist their man by sparring between Smith and me. Oh, what a contrast then and now! Half a million dollars and no risk. Well finally they tore up the ring and beat me with it—that is why the referee stopped the contest he was afraid of his own life.

"Now sir, I hope these few notes of facts may interest your readers, as truths will always stand where fiction tumbles by the wayside.

"I also took part in my first battle of the last Great War in Ypres Belgium. I hope and believe that the last battle with shot and shell I shall ever take part in. I sincerely hope education will put us beyond this kind of sport or ambition.

Carpentier Does Much Gym Work

French Champion Has About
Same Ideas as Americans

PREFERS PRIVATE WORK

By JAMES J. CORBETT
Former Heavyweight Champion of the World
(Written Expressly for the I. N. S.)
(Copyright 1921 by I. N. S.)

MANHASSET, L. I., June 20.—Georges Carpentier's ideas of training are practically the same as those of American fighters with the one noticeable exception that he prefers to work in private.

There is one thing more—he does a greater amount of gymnasium work.

When Descamps first began to teach me," said Georges in a conversation with me the other day, "he started with much acrobatics. Before I was taught to box I learned to—what you call—'tumble.' When I was yet but a boy I could walk anywhere on my hands. Acrobatics as much as anything else, aided in my physical development and I believe they are just as essential to me today."

Carpentier's wonderfully developed arms, shoulders and legs prove the truth of his assertion. Had it not been for the sort of training he has had he would not have them today and he uses acrobatic stunts scientifically in training for every fight.

Aside from this his training routine is almost identical with that of Champion Jack Dempsey. For instance, he works out with little fellows as well as big ones. The sparring mates of the rivals like Journee and Jeanette out here and Burke, Williams, Renault and Glee in Dempsey's camp, help Jack and Georges as smaller men could not do in roughing it. They also aid in keeping the champion and his challenger from losing the range of their punches. They can give and take, which is absolutely necessary.

But the little fellows play their part. Italian Joe Gans and Marcel Denys step around mightily briskly. They uncork lightning-like punches and they aid Georges in his footwork. He can afford to let them put everything they have into their punches too, and this is good for his stomach, which he permits them to hammer with a free will. Dempsey has Joe Benjamin, Irish Patsy Cline and Babe Herman for the same purpose and, in addition to help him determine the range for a fighter in a crouching position.

With the big fight getting close now, Carpentier plans to put his best licks since coming to Manhasset. His private workouts will be full of ginger and he is showing more for the members of the press, too. Today he was slated to box for the reporters. Tonight he may go over to Ebbets Field where Paul Journee will make his first appearance in an American ring against Charley Weinert in a scheduled 15 round bout.

Defeat of Volstead Bill Is Predicted By Opposition

up with a lot of other controversial matters. I am deeply sorry that such a situation has arisen. But the Congress cannot be expected to take action which clearly will exterminate legitimate interests, under the guise of interdicting beer."

The row between the "drys" means inevitably that the House Senate will refuse to set aside its normal procedure to furnish a vehicle to "railroad" the bill through.

As the merry dry row brewed, there came a demand upon the Treasury to issue the beer regulations, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon directed Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair to make the beer regulations effective without further delay. There was the suggestion in these complaints that the action of the Treasury in withholding the regulations was contrary to law, and that brewers interested would seek a writ of mandamus to compel the issuance of regulations, sanctioned by the opinion of the department of justice three months ago. Secretary Mellon frankly said there was no legal excuse for holding up the regulations, and he admitted that brewers, if they elected could be successful through mandamus proceedings in forcing the Treasury to put the regulations into operation.

Revenue Commissioner Blair today said that the "drys" were hopelessly divided, and that their apparent hostility to any modification of the Volstead bill would only prolong the fight in Congress into an endless struggle.

He decided to affix signature at once to the beer regulations, and they will go out in a day or two, giving full authority to brewers to manufacture medicinal beer with a "kick" and to sell it to wholesale and retail druggists.

Even the "drys" today had no hope for early action by the House, and foresaw stubborn opposition in the Senate, if not actual defeat in that body. Treasury officials, viewing the circumstances said there was nothing left to do but make real beer available, as they feel justified in doing under the law, and leave future developments to Congress.
